BNP Chairman Visits America

Nick Griffin, the new Chairman of the British National Party, paid a flying visit to America during April's Easter Holiday. This was his second visit to America, the first being seventeen years ago when he was a member of the National Front. Nick stayed with American Friends of the BNP Chairman, Mark Cotterill, and his family in Falls Church in Northern Virginia. The three main objectives for the short visit were: 1) to address the American Friends of the BNP St. George's Day Meeting, 2) to meet with the key activists in the organization, and, 3) to meet some of the main American Nationalist leaders. All three goals were accomplished.

The St. George's Day Meeting went off very well (see full report on page five) with almost seventy members and supporters attending. Nick spent considerable time in organizational meetings with key activists from the AF-BNP. Among the topics discussed were fund raising, Canada, recruitment, propaganda, and the BNP's relationship with American Nationalist groups. He also got to meet a number of the leading American Nationalist leaders and writers including White Civil Rights leader David Duke, nationally syndicated columnist Dr. Samuel Francis, Barnes Review Editor John Tiffany, American Renaissance Assistant Editor Jim Lubinskas, Southern Legal Resource Center Attorney Kirk Lyons, and some leading members of Pat Buchanan's campaign organization.

Although every major British news outlet in the Washington, D.C., area was contacted about Nick Griffin's visit and invited to the St. George's Day Meeting, not one of them attended and no reports appeared in any British newspapers. It seems that the liberals and left wingers who dominate the British news media do not want anyone to know that the BNP is now a serious political party and a growing force in British politics. As they find it difficult to write anything negative about the party and Nick Griffin, they have now gone back to the silent treatment, i.e., "if you can't write anything bad about them, don't write anything at all." The media blackout of Griffin's visit to America is evidence that this is happening.

There was very little time for sightseeing, but Nick did get to see some of the more interesting parts of downtown Washington, D.C., and some of the Hispanic occupied areas of Northern Virginia! It was great to have the new Chairman of the BNP over in America. We all got a tremendous amount out of it and we hope that we don't have to wait another seventeen years before he returns! Finally, a big "thank you" to our supporters who dug deep into their pockets and made it possible for Nick to come over. We appreciate your support and won't forget it. □

Mission Statement of the American Friends of the BNP

The American Friends of the BNP is comprised of men and women living in the United States and Canada, who are of British* descent or who are descended from European peoples and who share our goals as listed below. We gather together voluntarily to peacefully and legally pursue our aims.

The aims of the American Friends of the BNP are:

- 1) To preserve and foster British culture and heritage among Americans of British or other European descent;
- 2) To educate Americans of British descent about British Nationalism, so that we may learn how more effectively to promote nationalism in America and to take our country back;
- 3) To build bridges of understanding between the British people and their American cousins;
- 4) To render political and moral support to the cause of British Nationalism, which is best represented by the British National Party (BNP);
- 5) To enact a program of activities to advance the preceding points.

* In general we define "British" as including the English, Irish, Scotch-Irish, Scottish and Welsh. However it can also include a number of lesser well-known peoples such as the Cornish, the Manx (the people of the Isle of Man), and the Channel Islanders (people from the islands of Alderney, Jersey, Guernsey, or Sark).

Guest Editorial

EDITOR'S NOTE: Welcome to Issue 4 of Heritage and Destiny, the Newsletter of the American Friends of the BNP. Please keep sending in your letters, articles, photographs, and, most importantly, donations, however large or small – every dollar counts. The following is a submission which we received from one of our members. We feel that it contains an important message that all should heed.

Prediction is always a risky business. For every prognosticator from the past who is today hailed as an inspired prophet, there are thousands of self-proclaimed seers that time has revealed to have been completely mistaken in their predictions – often absurdly so. Yet far more dangerous than the possibility of mistaken prophecy is the failure to attempt to extrapolate from existing, well-established trends into the future. As the saying goes, a people that fails to plan for its future is likely not to have one.

We note that the number of White births in the U.S. is now well below the replacement level, that is, many more White Americans die each year than there are White babies born. The Black, Asian and Hispanic birthrates, however, are all far above replacement level, that is, their populations are rising dramatically each year (especially the Hispanic population). Additionally, there are enormous numbers of nonwhite immigrants entering the U.S. – perhaps two million a year – many of them illegally.

Thus, any reasonable and knowledgeable person may extrapolate as follows:

2000 – As of this year, White Americans have fallen to minority status in three states: California (the most populous state) and New Mexico most recently, and Hawaii years ago.

2008 – The last year it will be possible for a Republican to be elected President if current demographic and voting trends remain relatively constant. About 60 percent of Whites vote Republican, and about 40 percent vote Democratic. Over 90 percent of nonwhites vote Democratic. After 2008, there will be too few Whites and too many nonwhites for a Republican to be elected to the Oval Office, or for there to be Republican majority in Congress.

2020 – Outbreak of widespread, full-scale interracial warfare throughout the U.S., as predicted by military analyst Thomas W. Chittum. (See the review of his book Civil War II: The Coming Breakup of America on pages 10-12).

2025 – Approximate date that White Americans will fall to minority status throughout the U.S. if current demographic trends (including immigration) remain relatively constant, and if we use the common racial nationalist definition of "White," which is any person of non-Jewish European descent who has no substantial nonwhite ancestry.

2032 – Approximate date that White Americans will fall to minority status throughout the U.S. if current demographic trends (again, including immigration) remain relatively constant and if one uses the U.S. Census Bureau's definition of "White" which includes not just those of European descent, but also Turks, Jews, Arabs, North Africans, Iranians, East Indians, and many Hispanics.

2050 – Approximate date that White people would fall to minority status in the U.S. if immigration were ended today, i.e., because of differences in birth and death rates alone, and if we again use the Census Bureau's definition of "White."

2200 – Approximate date of the final extinction of the White race in the U.S. No more White babies will be born in the U.S. after this date.

The time for fence-sitting is now over. The time for running away is past. The time for sticking one's head in the sand like an ostrich (or a Republican) is gone. Now is the time for action, for commitment and for sacrifice. Now, while some little time still remains, is the time to fight back. □

MARTIN KERR, Falls Church, Virginia

Recent Events and Activities

The American Friends of the BNP has organized or been involved in a number of activities since the last newsletter, including the following:

★ Our meeting on Thursday, March 30 in Arlington, Northern Virginia was a great success. We had a record turnout, with members and supporters attending from as far away as California, Florida, Alabama, Louisiana, Oregon and even Canada. The only problem was that we had booked a meeting room for 100 people, but over 120 supporters showed up! A nice problem to have!

The meeting, which was again chaired by long-standing local Nationalist Martin Kerr, started with the playing of the American and then the British national anthems.

There were three main speakers. The first was Paul Fromm, an immigration restriction and free speech activist from "The Socialist Republic of Canada," who spoke about the racial problems north of the border and Nationalists' lack of freedom there. He draped Canada's old flag – which included the Union Jack – over the podium, and explained that, because of its British symbolism the liberals replaced it in the mid-1960s with the Maple Leaf; not coincidentally, just before they also opened up Canada's borders to the Third World. Visit his website at: www.canadianfreespeech.com.

The second speaker was Don Black, webmaster of www.stormfront.org, of Florida. Don is a regular speaker now at AF-BNP meetings and is always welcome. He spoke about the Internet and how the enemies of free speech are trying to deny Nationalists the right to use it as others do. He told the packed room that Nationalists should make the most of the Internet to further our cause while we are still able to.

The third and last of the main speakers was White Civil Rights leader David Duke, President of the National Organization For European American Rights (NO-FEAR), of Louisiana. David is always a big attraction for our meetings and draws a large crowd. It was great to have him address our biggest-ever meeting. He spoke about the threats to White survival, both in America and worldwide, and what we as Racial Nationalists can do to stop them. He called on everybody in the room, young and old alike, to get involved in the struggle to win back our nations from those who wish to destroy us. Check out the NO-FEAR/David Duke website at: www.nofear.net.

There then followed a few brief speakers including American Friends of the BNP Chairman, Mark Cotterill, who detailed the BNP's election plans back in England. He said the BNP was on the threshold of an election breakthrough, but it would take a lot of money to actually make it happen. He then held a collection "Dutch-Auction" style, which brought in over $1,300 for the cause (another new record).

Next on was James Lubinskas, Assistant Editor of American Renaissance (check out their website at: www.amren.com), who spoke about their then upcoming conference, and finally Peter Gemma, a spokesman from the Virginia Reform Party (check out their website at: www.reformparty.org), who spoke about the importance of getting Pat Buchanan on the ballot in all 50 states.

The meeting ended with everybody in high spirits, looking forward to some victories for our movement, which have been few and far between in recent times. We also signed up another dozen members that evening, so all in all it was a very successful meeting. However next time we need to get a bigger room!

★ The following weekend saw the start of the fourth American Renaissance conference, organized by Jared Taylor, Editor of the monthly newsletter of the same name. On Friday evening we attended the formal reception and set up our literature table ready for the next day. On Saturday, April 1, the conference proper started, with Prof. Richard Lynn, formally of the Ulster Institute for Social Research in Northern Ireland. He discussed the history and impact of mass Third World immigration into Britain. Prof. Lynn now lives in Herefordshire in England (the county where the BNP elected a Councilor in April). Other speakers during the morning session included Dr. Samuel Francis, a regular face at our meetings, who spoke on "Race and the American Right," and Prof. Philippe Rushton, another Englishman, now living in Canada, who spoke about his recent trip to South Africa where he tested the IQs of Black university students.

After the lunch break we heard speeches from the conference organizer, Jared Taylor, who discussed the prospects for White people in the 21st Century, and Bruno Gollnisch, the second in command of France's Front National (FN), who explained the nature and objectives of what was until recently Europe's most successful Nationalist Party. Later that evening, the after-dinner speaker was yet another Englishman, Prof. Frank Ellis of Leeds University, who defied warnings from the Liberal Jewish hate magazine Searchlight, the left wing Guardian newspaper, and many at his own University not to attend the conference. He gave a very powerful speech on the failed multicultural experiment in Britain.

The conference resumed on Sunday morning with a speech by Dr. Robert Weissberg on the relationship between Blacks and Jews (Dr. Weissberg himself is Jewish). He was followed by Roger McGrath of California, who spoke about the reconquista or "reconquering" of California by Mexicans. The final speaker was Sam Dickson of Georgia. Sam is a British-American and a long-time supporter of the BNP. He discussed the demonization of Whites who want to preserve their race and civilization.

During the weekend we sold a very large amount of BNP publications and copies of Heritage and Destiny from our literature table. We also signed up half a dozen new members from the conference attendees. There was a good turnout of AF-BNP members, a number of whom helped man the literature table. Special thanks here to Reg.

★ After the conference finished we held our first "Red, White and Blue Celebration" in nearby Ashburn, Virginia, in Loudoun County at the home of one of our members. This was very successful, with a large number of our supporters stopping by. We were honored to have Bruno Gollnisch of Front Nationale as one of our guests. Another similar celebration is planned for this Summer.

★ Our St. George's Day Meeting on Saturday, April 22, went off very well indeed. Around seventy members and supporters attended, which was very good for an Easter weekend. Also, the National Alliance held a meeting on the same day at the same time, so we lost a number of people to that event. However, all in all, we were very pleased with the afternoon's events.

Our first speaker was Howard Fezell of West Virginia. Howard hosts a pro-gun website, www.2ndAmendment.net, and he spoke about the upcoming Million Mom March in Washington, D.C., and the counter-demonstration by the Second Amendment Sisters, Inc. that he was helping to organize. He called on as many people as possible to support the pro-gun counter-demonstration.

The second speaker was Kirk Lyons of the Southern Legal Resource Center in North Carolina. Kirk is a great unreconstructed Southerner, and he gave a fine speech on the growing Southern Nationalist movement. He explained how we as racial Nationalists should be making alliances whenever and wherever we can to further the aims of our cause. Check out his website at: www.cheta.net/slrc.

Our third speaker was Roy Armstrong, a German-American member of the National Democratic Party of Germany (NPD), who now lives in Louisiana. Roy spoke of the problems facing Nationalists in today's multicultural Germany because of the lack of freedom. However, there are good signs now that a more united and younger Nationalist movement is growing in Germany, and that electoral success as has occurred in nearby Austria will be happening before long in Germany as well. You can check out the NPD website at: www.npd.net/npd-pv.

The fourth and main speaker of the afternoon was Nick Griffin, the new chairman of the British National Party, who made a most powerful speech calling on all American Nationalists of British descent to rally round the American Friends of the BNP and give them whatever support they can. He pointed out that many times before in past history the White race had been in peril, but time and time again it has survived. Griffin said we have not lost yet; the battle can still be won and we will do everything we possibly can to win.

David Duke speaking from the top table at the AF-BNP St. George's Day Meeting

"The internationalists are pushing their globalist, multiracist agenda on a worldwide basis, so a victory for nationalism in just one country – although inevitable – will not be enough. We have to win not just in two or three European countries like Austria and Italy, but also in Britain and the USA." To be honest, Nick Griffin's speech was one of the best I have ever heard since joining the movement back in 1977. Check out the BNP's great websites at: www.bnpp.net and www.bnpp.to.

After Griffin's speech, American Friends of the BNP Chairman, Mark Cotterill, said a few words and then held a collection "Dutch Auction" style, which brought in almost $900, despite the fact that nearly everyone present had also paid $10 to attend the meeting. Then followed a question and answer session and the famous raffle!

The final speaker of the afternoon was David Duke, who had driven all the way up from New Orleans, Louisiana (a round trip of some three thousand miles), with Roy Armstrong – which took them a day and a half! – all so they could meet in person the new Chairman of the BNP, Nick Griffin. They stayed in the area for just half a day and then they were back on the road for another day and a half of driving back home to Louisiana.

Where were the other American Nationalist leaders? It was disgraceful that apart from David Duke and Sam Francis, none of the other so-called "leaders" of the American Right showed up to meet Nick Griffin. This, I think goes to show once again that most American Nationalist "leaders" either don't know or don't care about what's going on in other parts of the White World. Until they understand that this is a Worldwide battle in which America plays a big part, we are not going to make any progress this side of the pond. Thank you David and Sam for showing that at least some American Nationalist leaders care what's going on outside the 50 states.

Duke spoke of his recent trip to Europe where he met with Nationalist leaders in both France and Italy. He also spoke of the recent hate crime murder in Alexandria, Virginia, where an eight year old young White boy, Kevin Shifflett, was knifed to death by a crazed Negro. Duke pointed out that the media are of course not calling this a hate crime since the victim was White. He ended by giving praise to Nick Griffin and the work that the BNP is doing back in the "old country."

The meeting was again chaired by long-standing local Nationalist Martin Kerr who did a fine job. Thanks should also go out to Reg, Curtis, Fisheye, Carl, and Michelle who all helped out with making the meeting a great success.

After the meeting a very enjoyable social was held in the downstairs restaurant. About half of those attending the meeting stayed on for it, which was great. It gave everyone the chance to get to know each other better and to meet and talk with the guest speakers. All in all, a very successful day and a very enjoyable and successful trip over the pond for BNP Chairman Nick Griffin (as mentioned earlier, this was his first visit to the States for seventeen years)! Many thanks again to everyone who showed up – and to those who did not, it was your loss; you missed one hell of a meeting and a great speech by Nick Griffin.

★ Earlier that same day (April 22), Duke, Griffin, Ron Doggett and Roy Armstrong had visited the scene of the above-mentioned probable hate crime in nearby Alexandria. There they talked to a number local people, including policemen, and Duke and Griffin gave short speeches outside the city hall, which drew attention to the characteristic media blackout of this and other hate crimes against White people. (We have a video of this available for anybody interested.)

★ On Mothers' Day, Sunday, May 14, a number of members of the American Friends of the BNP supported the pro-gun rally organized by the Second Amendment Sisters, Inc. in downtown Washington, D.C. This rally was in opposition to the so-called "Million Mom March" which was taking place at the same time a couple miles away. We distributed a special flyer made up for the occasion titled "Don't Let Clinton do to you what Blair did to us." The flyer explained how both gun ownership and free speech are now banned in "Blair's Britain" and warned that Clinton is planning to do the same here in America. The flyer brought in a good response from those attending the pro-gun rally who were also attracted to the St. George flag that was flown by our group. After the rally we marched from the mall with over a thousand American patriots to the Capitol building to show our support for Second Amendment rights.

★ Less than a week later, on Saturday, May 20, we were in Richmond, the old capitol of the Confederacy, for the Virginia Reform Party state convention. We were there to support and elect delegates to the Reform Party's national convention which will be held this August in California. A strong slate of pro-Pat Buchanan delegates was elected, which is what we were aiming for. The main guest speaker of the afternoon was one of our supporters, Dr. Samuel Francis, who spoke about the great threat of Third World immigration into America and how Pat Buchanan and the Reform Party are the only ones making this a major election issue. □

Best Election Results Since 1977!

On May 4, 2000, the BNP received its best ever election results, and the best results received by Nationalists in Britain since 1977. There were some great results in London, with Mike Newland, the BNP's candidate for Mayor, polling almost 80,000 votes. Mr. Newland took 33,569 first preference votes and a further 45,337 second preference votes from other electors. This means that, despite all the media demonization in the past and a Londonwide media blackout during the campaign, the BNP polled 10% of the vote obtained by "Red Ken" Livingstone, who won the election. That's an awful lot of Londoners that Livingstone declared war on as "racists" in his first post-election speech!

On the Party list election for the London Assembly, the BNP polled almost 47,000 votes. This was 2.87% of the vote, which means that they quite comfortably topped the 2.5% needed to retain their $8,000 deposit. In last June's European elections just under 18,000 Londoners voted BNP. This time, just eleven months later, 78,906 backed the party – an amazing fourfold increase in the vote! The BNP vote was even more significant in its heartland areas in East London, where its vote topped 7.1%. When you take into account that about one third of the population is nonwhite, it emerges that around 12% of White East-Enders voted BNP.

These votes may not seem high by American standards, but it must be remembered that almost twenty parties ran candidates in the Assembly elections and the BNP finished fifth. Despite the fact that the BBC TV gave the phony "Kosher-Nationalist" UK Independence Party a free TV broadcast while denying one to the BNP, the BNP still beat the UKIP in every London constituency in the Mayoral race. The BNP also got more votes than the London Socialist Alliance and Socialist Labour Party combined! In many areas the BNP beat the Green Party, but the Green Party got an overall better vote due to its high number of second preference votes. The Greens finished fourth, one step ahead of the BNP.

As well as the excellent results in London on May 4, the BNP also made very significant progress in council elections all over England. The best election result last year was in the Midlands, just outside of Birmingham, where Steve Edwards received 17.2% of the vote in Tipton Green. This year, however, the party did even better, gaining 23.6% of the vote despite a massive Labour Party/Asian vote-rigging operation. In nearby Dudley, the BNP doubled its share of the vote from 8% last year to 16%, and in Stoke-On-Trent the BNP vote went up from 5% to 9%. In Lancashire, where the BNP was standing for the first time, it took a staggering 21% in Burnley and 10% in Oldham. While in Sunderland, in the far north east (a Socialist stronghold) of England, the BNP polled 8%. Elsewhere the BNP polled 8% in Cheshunt in Hertfordshire, and in Leeds in Yorkshire just under 4%. On average the BNP vote was around 10%, an 80% rise on last year's elections.

The media silence which surrounded the BNP campaign is testament to the chronic nervousness of the liberal "elite" these days. They are scared of the BNP's potential, as they know that an ever-growing number of ordinary British people have had enough of their failed multiracial experiment. This shows in the results in both London and elsewhere in England, and with the huge improvement in the response rate of enquiries from all over Britain whenever large numbers of leaflets go out to the general public.

The American Friends of the BNP send congratulations to all of the BNP candidates, including Bernard Haycock – now Councilor Haycock – who was elected unopposed in Bromyard, in Herefordshire, a rural area of Middle England near the Welsh border. Commenting on his election and the great results obtained by all BNP candidates, Mark Cotterill, Chairman of the American Friends of the BNP, said, "The BNP polled very, very well on May 4. It received its best ever election results, and with an improving organization under the leadership of Nick Griffin and with public opinion continuing to move in our direction, it's going to do even better in the future. Many thanks to all our American supporters who dug deep into their pockets to help with the huge cost of the election campaign. Your support is very much appreciated. However, the battle has only just begun and we will need even more help from you in the months ahead. We know we can count on the many Americans who now support us to help us support the BNP back in the Old Country. Nick Griffin and the BNP need our help; we will not let them down." □

Keep Ireland White!

EDITOR'S NOTE: The BNP has been getting an increasing number of contacts from Irish Nationalists, either living and working in England or still living in Eire, who are greatly concerned about the growing tide of nonwhite immigration and asylum-seeking "refugees" into their homeland. The BNP sympathizes with the plight of what was, until recently, one of the whitest nations remaining in Western Europe, and urges all genuine Irish Nationalists to organize against this immigration flood as a matter of urgency. Clearly, the more Irish people who wake up to this — the greatest-ever threat to their ethnic and cultural survival — the more chance there is that something can be done. We therefore ask everyone who reads this article to forward it on to every person of Irish descent that he knows. Let's all work together, whether we be English, Irish or American, to help save one of the oldest and most beautiful European nations.

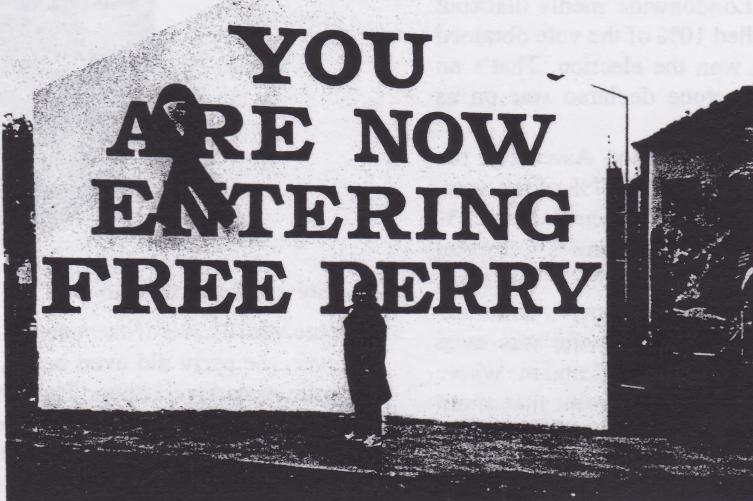

The relationship between Ireland's two largest ethnic groups, the Nationalist/Catholic community and the Protestant/Irish of British descent community, will certainly undergo some changes as nonwhite immigrants are allowed in by both governments. Irish and British leaders are giving mere lip service to the "natives" because there are jobs to be offered to the newcomers in high-tech sweat shops. The first lapping wave of these nonwhites has already caused a stir in Ireland, although there is very little political retaliation being meted out. What this is doing to Ireland's political equation is on par with the biggest events in that nation's history such as the Uprising of 1916 or the long civil war in Northern Ireland. In the political world coming, count on the Marxist Sinn Fein/IRA to scapegoat and sacrifice large sections of the Irish Nationalist community, right along with the "British," aka the Irish of British descent (the largest ethnic group in Northern Ireland), when the new ethnic equation kicks in. It doesn't take a fortune teller to figure this out — Sinn Fein/IRA leader Gerry Adams and his organizers already meet with nonwhite Marxist allies in America, people who routinely scapegoat Whites for every social ill (including middle-class Irish).

In America, Adam's allies believe Americans of European descent are simply evil oppressors, and as Adams is also a Marxist, he is a submarine ready to betray the Irish as an ethnic group at any time. The organizers of Sinn Fein/IRA, fake patriots as they are, already embrace Marxist allies such as Russell Means, the Native American Indian who wrote the book Europe Must Die. In the future, the Irish Marxists will embrace even more nationalities, and the ethnic traitors of Sinn Fein/IRA will be able to recruit them faster in Ireland; so we must warn Irish Americans not to help them. Eventually both Irish peoples will come to realize that the dying ideology of a narrow, obsolete Irish Nationalism is being used as a wolf's cloak by the Marxists. Let the Irish peoples take up a more united cause, leaving behind the sectarianism caused by religious and class war, and oppose every political leader who allows nonwhites to pour in.

The aim of the nonwhites would become what it became in America, a determined obsession to lord it over those whom they feel have oppressed them. These immigrants come in legally and illegally (assisted by the blind opportunistic eye of greed), as others have done in Ireland's past, but they are not racially compatible. They would serve no other purpose than the self-interest of international corporations, forces which also have a lot of expertise in cutting deals with Marxist opponents when it suits them. Yes, where were they before now? We don't want their cosmopolitanism, for there are enough examples of it elsewhere to forecast how it will become a united front against Whites. The owners and CEOs of international corporations in America, Ireland, and elsewhere, don't face the ugly human conflicts they create, they simply move their money elsewhere when the gold rush expires. They demonstrate a minimum of interest in any other kind of ecological or ethnic disaster.

The Irish must act soon, without much concern about who did what to whom between Nationalists and Unionists, because if enough nonwhites plant themselves it's going to be difficult to put them out. Strangers of all colors will soon be saying, just as the Sinn Fein/IRA race traitors already do: "Only a racist would think the newcomers are not Irish." When such thinking becomes routine, and the Irish peoples no longer have cultural supremacy — which is the right to believe they're a special race with their own land — then it will be near the end. If that is allowed to happen, and the evidence is there for a lot of us to know it is being allowed to happen, you may live to see the day when many Irish-Americans no longer feel inclined to visit Ireland. Some Irish Americans already murmur that it is too late for America. The wild geese are fleeing the large cities in America, where they are usually the last Whites who can afford to leave, and others are beginning to flee the suburbs as well. Wake up before it's too late! □

HAMILTON BARRETT, San Francisco, California

As a founding member of Australian National Action (which is in solidarity with the BNP), and a supporter of the Australian Friends of the BNP, I am moved to comment on Martin Kerr's review of Kevin Coogan's Dreamer Of The Day: Francis Parker Yockey And The Post-war Fascist International (Heritage and Destiny, Issue 3).

It seems that Mr. Kerr has misstated Yockey's position on issues of race policy and ideology. I appreciate there were space considerations, but a false impression was left to the reader. Perhaps this derives of your writer's opinion that Yockey's comprehensive work, Imperium, is a "great but infuriating work for Racial Nationalists." It all depends where one stands.

Mr. Kerr states that Yockey believed nonwhites could become members of the "Western Race." He further refers to Yockey's actual position whereby some Jews could become Westerners, "an assertion some Racial-Nationalists reject."

Yockey's position on race was a product not only of post-1945 facts, but of a keen analysis of the race-ideology of the German National-Socialists. The NS position earned rebuke as a "grotesquerie," a "snobbery" of "intellectual," "romantic" derivation. It was laden with "heavy consequences" for "Europe" when put into policy and action. These thoughts in Imperium were obviously sharpened when Yockey worked closely with German (and other) revolutionary nationalists.

In The Enemy Of Europe, Yockey analyzed the failure of German eastern policy in its rejection of Slavic allies. He went on to sum up the German experiment in fascism: "Everyone must now openly admit that the engraving of the outworn nonsense of the vertical race theory onto the glorious European Resurgence of Authority brought about by the European Revolution of 1933 was an enormous tragedy, all the more so since the coupling of the two ideas was in no way necessary or even logical."

In hindsight now, we recognize Yockey was referring to the Ariosophical occultism which was syncretized with the idea of "Nationalist-Socialism" inside the core molecule of German fascism. It was the aryanist-mystery cult, which engendered the idea of the "Slavic sub-human." It follows too, that while Yockey observed a great clash between the Western and the Russian "High Cultures," he believed the Eastern Europeans assimilable into the Western Culture. Voila! The essence of Yockey's race idea – which indeed might "infuriate" certain so-called "Racial Nationalists."

It should also be pointed out that Yockey's "Spengelian" positions on race and culture place him in the tradition of German ideological schools such as Conservative Revolution, National Revolution and National Bolshevism which were alert to the deficiencies of National Socialism before it formed a State and remained critical of it thereafter.

In our modern "Right," we have all witnessed National Socialism's coterie of admirers and would-be emulators. It is at the point of "race ideology" that these persons make their faulted claim to NS "validity" as a source of ideological-political formation. Yockey's value lies in the fact that so soon after the Second World War he provided a perspective on the very basis of their later distortion.

I am pleased nonetheless that Mr. Kerr has recommended that Coogan's book be read by people in our "movement." It will highlight Yockey's ideological contributions; although much of it is dated now, his work deserves attention by leaders in the cause of White racial rebirth.

Martin Kerr Replies:

It is heartening to know that there are Nationalist leaders throughout the world, such as Dr. Saleam, who read Yockey's works and give his ideas careful consideration. As I have stated, there is much in Yockey's thought that is valuable.

Dr. Saleam makes a number of points in his letter. His central contention, however, is that my review of Kevin Coogan's Dreamer of the Day, in some way "misstates" Yockey's positions and leaves the reader with "false impressions." It is, in fact, Dr. Saleam who is mistaken: my summary of Yockey's thought, although simplified, is absolutely correct and in no way distorts his theories. Everything in the review is based on textual evidence from Yockey's own writings, and specifically, on those writings which were published during Yockey's lifetime and under his editorship.

Yockey's racial theory explicitly rejects the idea that races are manifestations of biological reality. He states categorically that "Race is not group anatomy" (Imperium, p. 282). He castigates all racial theory that is biologically-rooted as "materialism" (p. 300) and specifically condemns the writings of Arthur de Gobineau, Houston Stewart Chamberlain and Madison Grant (p. 285). Yockey's antipathy for scientific racialism is so extreme that he issues blanket condemnations of Darwin's Theory of Evolution (pp. 66-77), of the application of Mendelian genetics to humans (p. 286) and of the very notion of "racial purity." (p. 304, 315)

With regard to Yockey's hypothetical "Western race" and the Jews, he writes "[M]any Jews have adopted Western feelings and rhythms, and thereby have acquired the Western race." (p. 296)

Dr. Saleam states that Yockey's rejection of biological racialism is in some way a reaction to the purported "deficiencies" of National-Socialist racial thought. I propose a possible alternate explanation: that Yockey (like Spengler) may have been partially of Jewish ancestry. As Coogan reveals, the identity of only one of Yockey's grandparents is a matter of public record. In particular, it is possible that his paternal grandfather was a Jew.

My own mentor, James H. Madole, knew Yockey and his family slightly. On several occasions, Madole spoke of a conversation he had with Yockey's daughter, Dr. Francesca Yockey, in which she confirmed to him that the family had Jewish blood. Subsequent to this conversation, Madole wrote in his National Renaissance Bulletin that Yockey was "one-quarter" Jewish. It is also interesting to note that Yockey associate Frederick Charles Weiss, who was another outspoken rejecter of biological racialism, was himself married to a Jew and had a half-Jewish daughter. At the root of things, I believe that Yockey rejected scientific racialism in favor of cultural-spiritual racialism because he may have been of mixed blood: that is, he considered himself to be one of the "many Jews" who "adopted Western feelings and rhythms, and thereby acquired the Western race."

With regard to Ariosophy, I would make the same point. Ariosophy is a form of racial occultism based on purity of the blood. That Yockey rejects Ariosophy in favor of other forms of occultism is consistent with his overall rejection of all racial theories that are grounded in scientific, biological realities.

As noted above, this is a simplified version of Yockey's thought. Anyone reading him in full will find that his theories are more subtle, more complex and richer than the bare-bones outline given here and in my previous review. His notion of "horizontal race" has merit, as does his discussion of the "subjective meaning of race." However, insofar as he seeks to divorce race from biological reality, he is dead wrong.

Despite these disagreements with Dr. Saleam, I am pleased to note his interest in Yockey. I hope that Nationalists can move beyond this aspect of Yockey's thought and learn from what he has to teach that is truly valuable. I especially recommend Yockey's laws concerning power politics, which are outlined in Imperium and further elaborated on in The Enemy of Europe. □

Book Review: Civil War II: The Coming Breakup of America by Thomas W. Chittum

Published by American Eagle Publications, Show Low, Arizona, 1996. Paperback, 202 pp. Available for $15.00 from: American Eagle Publications, P.O. Box 1507, Show Low, AZ 85902.

The last of the superpowers, the United States of America, has come to dominate today's world by default, and to seek to impose its own brand of cosmopolitan globalist market liberalism on that world, by force when necessary. So the nature of America, and how long it and its power will last, are of vital interest not merely to Americans but to everyone, everywhere.

That is what makes Tom Chittum's book so important. For, on the basis of what rapidly becomes apparent as extensive research viewed with a keen and critical intellect, Mr. Chittum, himself an American, concludes that America's might is more apparent than real – and not destined long to endure. For the United States, he argues, is doomed to violent disintegration in a second American Civil War. Doomed by the very multiethnic diversity on which America's current Politically Correct rulers, Democrat and Republican alike, so pride themselves.

As Mr. Chittum puts it, "America was born in blood. America suckled on blood. America gorged on blood and became a giant, and America will drown in blood.... America will explode in tribal warfare in our lifetime and shatter into several new ethnically based nations. And as America breaks up the very concept of multiethnic democracy will likewise be forever shattered."

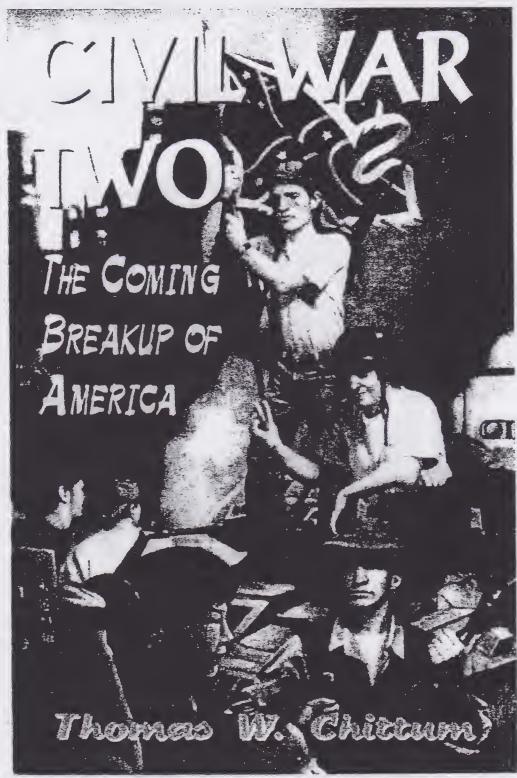

Mr. Chittum himself has first-hand experience of warfare. He served as a U.S. combat paratrooper in Vietnam at the height of that war. He went on to fight in the Rhodesian Army in the bush war in the mid-70s, before witnessing first hand the violent disintegration of what had been portrayed as a model multiethnic state, Yugoslavia, when he saw action in the early 1990s as a rifleman in the Croatian Army. The eye of a seasoned soldier and witness of exactly the sort of brutal ethnic warfare and social disintegration he foresees for his own country is brought tellingly to bear in his trenchant analysis.

But Tom Chittum has clearly seen more than just combat abroad. He has also seen, as few of his countrymen seem to have, the nature of national identity. He sees the lack of it as the fatal void under the heart of the modern U.S.A. and the root of its impending disastrous implosion. He opens his argument by drawing a cogent distinction between nations and empires. The former, are based on a single self-aware ethnic group. Empires, on the other hand, are multiethnic entities dominated by a minority, ultimately ruling by, as Chittum puts it, "naked military power." As he rightly says, "nations are inherently stable while empires are always inherently unstable."

In fact, he goes on to argue, multiethnic states of any kind are unstable. In a superbly argued chapter drawing on the experience of modern Europe, he demonstrates this point. He ranks the states of modern Europe by ethnic homogeneity in a table. A table which turns out to be in almost exactly the same order as would be one ranking them by their level of instability, violence and civil strife! It is at once obvious that, as he puts it, "the more monoethnic a European state is, the more likely it is to be peaceful and stable" – and vice versa.

He goes on to argue that, whilst the U.S.A. might have begun as a monoethnic, British-descended state which was at least potentially a stable nation, it is now rapidly turning into a very multiethnic and hence unstable empire, a process Chittum terms "Imperial Conversion." This process is being aided and abetted by the present corrupt and politically blinkered U.S. establishment. They and their core support base, essentially the affluent cosmopolitan technocratic/business cognitive elite identified by Richard Herrnstein and Charles Murray in The Bell Curve (another book well worth reading, incidentally!), are themselves aware of the social disintegration of America.

But, as Chittum says, they expect to ride it out safely in the walled, guarded estates now springing up across the outer suburbs of America, with their wealth buying them a decent standard of private health, education and comfort, whilst, outside, the ever more deracinated underclass festers impotently in poverty and squalor – the Latin American-style future U.S.A. predicted by The Bell Curve.

Again Chittum realizes, as most Americans from their President down clearly do not, that there is one crucial difference: ethnicity, which divides the U.S. far more than it does anywhere south of the Rio Grande. That is why, as he rightly warns, America's power elite and the mostly White wealthier section of society on whom their power rests may be resigned to living in a future like modern Brazil. But what they will get instead is a Bosnia.

For Chittum has spotted the demographic time-bomb ticking away under the U.S.A. – the demographics which are steadily, inexorably, eroding the position of the White "Anglos" who built the modern U.S.A. and who are the bedrock of its survival. Chittum hammers home these statistical nails in America's coffin one by one, with fact after fact, figure after figure. He does so – as he does with every fact he cites in support of his case – with meticulous quotation of evidence and sources. It is one of the great strengths of this book that every apparently startling fact or figure is firmly grounded in a footnote giving the original authoritative source, enabling the reader who does not at first believe him to check the facts for himself. Every Nationalist argument, especially those conflicting with the received wisdom of the media, should be similarly built on a firm foundation of checkable sources.

Already, he points out, "Anglo" Americans have become an ethnic minority in California, the U.S.A.'s most populous state, and indeed in the U.S. Southwest as a whole. In another three years, Texas, the biggest mainland state, will be majority nonwhite. By 2050, White Americans will be an ethnic minority in their own country, whilst the other ethnic groups who will then form the American majority do not, as Chittum convincingly demonstrates, feel any loyalty to the Anglo conception of the U.S.A.

Most Mexicans, for example, are understandably loyal, instead, to their own nation, Mexico, a nation from which, as Chittum rightly points out, the United States took by force those very Southwestern states in which Mexicans are once again becoming the majority and which Mexico still claims. Nor, indeed, has Mexico forgotten how it lost Texas, when Anglo immigrants poured in and swamped the native Mexicans, then demanded unification with their American motherland. Now, as Chittum rightly observes, the shoe is on the other foot! One of the potential flash points Chittum identifies for his Civil War II would be the secession from the U.S.A. of one or more Mexican-majority areas of the Southwestern U.S. in a mirror image of what Texas did to Mexico in 1836.

If that happened, or – another Chittum scenario – if Black separatists, who equally reject White "Amerika," sought to take over areas in which they predominate, Chittum graphically demonstrates how little already Washington could rely on its Army, let alone its police and National Guard, to restore U.S. control. The U.S. Armed Forces are already 40% non-white and getting darker by the day. Many inner urban police forces are deeply penetrated by Black and Hispanic gangs, many of whose members are also cops – amazing, but Chittum produces the sources to show it's true, and events unfolding in the Los Angeles Police Department as I write bear him out. White military and police officers are demoralized by Political Correctness and elbowed aside by affirmative action, while ethnic militias and gangs are already crystallizing out of the American populace. In Civil War II, Chittum argues, the US armed forces, like their Yugoslav counterparts, would fragment along ethnic lines, and so eventually would their country.

Chittum sees the Bosnianization of America occurring to some decree in the next 10-40 years. He gives a list of events, some of which have already happened, some of which are happening now and others which he predicts will happen. He suggests his readers watch out for and "tick off" his predictions as they occur, explaining how each will be one more step by America toward the abyss, an abyss in which, Chittum warns, cities will burn and millions will die on a scale which dwarfs the disintegration of Yugoslavia. Eventually, he predicts, stable nations will emerge from the wreck of the U.S.A. a Hispanic one in the Southwest (possibly part of a Greater Mexico, and doubtless like most of Hispanic America a corrupt, violent mess), a Black one in the Southeast, and a White one in the rest. He even suggests to his readers where to move to make sure they are not ethnically cleansed from the "wrong" successor state. Finally he adds a few other practical tips from a combat veteran to aid their and their families' survival.

Chittum is by no means the only American commentator who foresees an ethnic Civil War II – he arrays an impressive list of quotes from authoritative academics, politicians (mostly safely retired and thus able to speak freely at last!), senior military officers and even media commentators who share his forebodings. But he is probably the one who has argued the most sustained and compelling case that it is coming. After reading this book even the most skeptical must, I think, admit that an American Civil War II is at least a serious possibility, if not a probability.

I met Tom Chittum when he and I shared a platform at an American Friends of the BNP meeting in Arlington, Virginia, in the suburbs of Washington, D.C., this January. I was impressed then by the cogency of his analysis and the evident depth of the research underlying his speech, even though it was delivered by this ex-soldier somewhat in the manner of a U.S. Army NCO briefing his men! His book is even more cogently and persuasively argued. If he is right, and I think he well may be, then the last superpower will collapse even more unpleasantly than its late rival.

The death of America in ethnic civil war will be horrible. But it will free the world from the illusion that multiethnic states can work, and from the bombers of Belgrade and Baghdad who tried to impose that illusion on the world by force at the same time that their media sought to carpet-bomb the cultures of the world with mindless drivel. Out of the ashes of America will arise a world of nations set free to pursue their own destinies in harmony with their own cultures and identities. If, as Tom Chittum so persuasively argues, the United States of America has to die, then in achieving that at least it will not have died in vain. □

REVIEWED BY STEPHEN KING, London, England.

Letters from Readers

Sir – I read with interest your Internet report of Nick Griffin speaking at your meeting in Arlington. You were right to criticize the so-called leaders of Nationalism in America for not showing up. I don't trust a single one of them. Our borders are wide open and we are being flooded daily with enough people to fill a city but no one can work well enough together to stop it. They run their organizations like churches. They get too caught up in themselves and miss the point. If they don't think it is a global issue all they have to do is take a look at the hell Austria is going through right now.

I sincerely believe that the BNP is a progressive nationalist party. You intend to make things better for all the people, not just a chosen few. You are even going to help the immigrants with "homeward bound" resettlement grants and the governments which take the immigrants back are going to benefit by increased trade with Britain as a dealing point.

This is my take on the situation. It may sound strange but it is realistic. I am devoted to helping return Great Britain to the goals of the BNP. Nothing will change that because it is not the BNP I cherish (although you are a great bunch of guys and girls); I cherish Great Britain and all she has given the world. She set the world in motion. America is at this point so diverse with nearly 100 million nonwhite people living here. In America I believe that we should work toward living peacefully together as long as we can. Don't get me wrong. I believe in being separate not because I'm racist but because people don't appear to be able to get along with each other, and the children are the ones who are hurt the most. But we can clean up Europe, and perhaps Australia. At this point the Great American Experiment is too far along to change, but we can stop the limitless flow from south of our border. I am OK with the experiment as long as I have somewhere to go, i.e., Britain or Australia. Something you should consider is that most of your immigrant population in Britain would feel very much at home in America. How much would another couple of million more Third Worlders hurt (as long as they are in California or New York!)? In Judo you learn to take advantage of things which you can't change and to use them to your advantage. We have to be realistic: we are to highly integrated here physically if not mentally.

My point is that, unlike those American movement "leaders" who didn't show up to hear Nick Griffin, I see myself as a member of the global White community and I know that when the Movement gets a footing in Europe and elsewhere it will come to America, but not until then. So it makes sense to me to accept a couple million immigrants from the Mother Country in order to set the ball rolling; in the long run it will only benefit the White world. If we don't end up with a White section in America then at least Britain will be free and that is also my home and the home of my countless ancestors. The home of my language. The home of my faith. The home of my perspective. I think sometimes Britons don't understand American passion for Great Britain. Who would I be if there had been no little island off the coast of Europe called Britain? To me, parts of America can be sacrificed but Great Britain cannot! Besides, until there are some countries which are White Nationalist ruled there will be no political force in America to change America, as you have now witnessed yourself.

Yours sincerely,

Name Withheld, Mobile, Alabama.

Sir – With regards to the BNP's views on Ireland, I agree there should be cooperation between the north and south to prevent Ireland becoming a multiracial mess like the rest of Britain, but does this mean that the BNP is going to drop its support for the Loyalists in Ulster? I think the BNP has a problem when it comes to closer ties with patriots in Ireland. The BNP as a British Nationalist party can hardly adopt a pro-united Ireland stance or even independence for Ulster (something I am in favor of). If it did it would no longer be a Party seen as defending the Union. Also I wonder how many of its grass roots members would support such a change. I know many of them are staunch Loyalists and would see any overtures to the Irish as some form of sell out.

It is interesting to see the BNP criticize Sinn Fein for its support for multiculturalism which the Ulster Unionist parties also support, though the BNP does not criticize them for that. I feel the only way for there to be peace and cooperation between the two sides in Ireland is to end Westminster rule, not only over Ulster, but also over England, Scotland and Wales. Then we could become a family of nations all on an equal footing. The tragedy of the BNP is that it is the BNP and not the English National Party.

Yours for the cause,

David Fogden, Coventry, England.

Sir – I wrote to the BNP in Britain and asked them how I, as an American, can help the cause of British Nationalism. They told me to write to you. I looked over your website and was very pleased to see that you don't just restrict your membership to Americans of British descent. I'm of Polish, Lithuanian, and Italian descent but I would like to join and get involved in the American Friends of the BNP.

I believe that all White Americans should fight for the cause of British Nationalism. I say this because, as White Americans, we all have British roots culturally, if not racially. Every White American should consider British culture his own, and should consider every White man in Britain his brother. Most White Americans have assimilated into America's British culture. For example, my surname Baran is an Anglicized version of Baranowski.

All of the White people in America are amalgamating into a new "Anglo-Saxon" race. This identity should be instilled in all European-Americans so that we can unite as a people, and advance the cause of British culture and Nationalism. Of course there's the religious divide. I'm a Roman Catholic traditionalist (Tridentine Roman Rite), whereas Britain is mainly Anglican. But remember, Britain was Roman Catholic before she was Anglican!

I am enclosing my first month's membership dues and I look forward to working with you in the future.

Yours sincerely,

Jason R. Baran, Lockport, New York.

Sir – I enjoyed the last issue of Heritage and Destiny, but I must disagree with you as far as the Reform Party is concerned. They are not now and will never be a Nationalist party – they are not the answer our country needs. I thank you for featuring Pat Buchanan's book A Republic Not an Empire. I fully agree with him when he says it was not in America's interests to go to war with Germany. I would like to buy a copy of the book from you.

Fourteen Words,

Kevin Hutchins, Hillsdale, Michigan

Sir – As you know, we, the White populations of the world, are in a colossal race war. We are presently losing that war. However, your organization and my response are proof that Whites are beginning to fight for their rights and race. After much hardship and chaos we will prevail, because our enemies have a fatal flaw. Their effort, at bottom, is against Nature and Reason and as such can never succeed, though they will cause a lot of suffering. I want to take part in their destruction and so I hope my membership dues and small contributions are a modest step in that direction.

Yours Sincerely,

Robert Jackson, Ridley Park, Pennsylvania

Sir – Congratulations on producing a first class newsletter. The copy of Heritage and Destiny I received was very well written and put together. My only criticism is there were not enough press cuttings. At present I read a number of other Rightist newsletters, including The Battle Flag, which is fabulous aside from its content and layout. I will be writing to The Battle Flag's editor about this shortly.

Yours for God and Country.

A Different Perspective on America, Past & Future

EDITOR'S NOTE: We do not as a rule publish unsigned articles sent to us by authors too frightened to put their names to them. However, the article below intrigued us as it brought up many different ideas that we felt our readers should have the chance to see and then discuss with their colleagues. We look forward to hearing your responses and will publish some of them in our next issue.

America was not founded or developed by a mixture of immigrants from all over the world. That is history rewritten by our enemies to suit their needs. America was created by European peoples, through the deliberate and systematic replacement of the aborigines, to produce the greatest civilization the world has ever known. Where this has not happened in North America, chaos and degeneracy has resulted. There were amongst the European settlers a large number of racially identical and culturally similar peoples; all others are not Americans, but "hyphenated Americans."

There were a number of mistakes made in the development of America, from the beginning up until the present day, including:

- 1) Canada and Greenland should have been absorbed, certainly in the twentieth century, in exchange for any aid to Europe.
- 2) Non-European labor (Black slaves) was used in the South by the Southern ruling elite with the disastrous results in evidence today.
- 3) A similar effect occurred in the North due to the greed of the Northern plutocrats. Although nominally European (with quotas introduced to ensure this), the Jews got in and America began to die.
- 4) The settlement of the West was only half completed. The more fertile half known to the natives as Mexico, for some inexplicable reason, was not settled, although it could have been done easily with the natives being moved to reservations and the land opened up to European farming families. This again could have been done in the first half of the twentieth century if America had not been diverted into two totally pointless (as far as American interests were concerned) European wars.
- 5) The Zionists now have complete control of the American media [actually, it's only about 95% control – Ed.] and are using it with fanatical hatred to destroy the European-American people in three ways: a) encouraging moral degeneracy, which leads to a low birth rate, b) swamping the U.S.A. with third world immigrants by the millions, and, c) promoting race mixing and intermarriage.

However, by making use of the fact that European America is still the greatest power on the earth, the future can still be saved by the following program:

- 1) Moving the United Nations out of America, say to a Pacific Island, under the pretext that this would be more equidistant from the three great powers, Russia, China and the U.S.A.

2) Divide the world into zones of influence. Allot each zone to a superpower with the understanding that the other superpowers will not intervene militarily. China would control East Asia with the exception of Australia, which would become an America protectorate. Russia would control West Asia and Europe, excluding Britain, which would also become a protectorate of America

3) Sub-Saharan Africa, North Africa, Middle East and India could be a zone controlled by no super power and open to all.

4) In exchange for the concessions to Russia and China, the U.S.A. would be given a completely free hand in the Western Hemisphere. The only nuclear powers capable of interfering, France and Britain, would be too scared of Russia to move.

5) After putting pressure on Brazil for joint military action, America and Brazilian troops would occupy Spanish-speaking South and Central America and divide the territory between the U.S.A and Brazil. The U.S.A would occupy all the territory down to the Panama Canal, which would be enlarged to form a clear stretch of water. The whole area including the USA, Canada and Greenland would become the United States of North America (USNA). The number of states would increase from 50 to about 100! Brazil would then form either Greater Brazil or the United States of South America (USSA). The Greater and Lesser Antilles would form part of the USNA.

6) Immediately afterward, to improve their prospects and social advancements, the entire non-European and mixed-race peoples of the USNA would be transferred to the USSA (Greater Brazil) where they would be ethnically more compatible.

To gain political power in order to carry out this program we must, however, take back the control of our media from the Zionists. With a free media, Nationalists should be able to elect one of our own to the presidency and after that take back the U.S. Congress as well. How to take back control of the media is another matter, though, and I will leave it to others better than me to explain how that can be done. □

Book Review: Faith and Freedom – The Scots-Irish in America, by Billy Kennedy

Published by Emerald House Group, Inc. Greenville, SC. 1999. Hard cover. Available for $16.00 from: Emerald House Group, Inc., 427 Wade Hampton Blvd., Greenville, SC 29609.

Billy Kennedy's popular Scots-Irish chronicles detail the major impact Ulster settlers had in the birth and development of America. In his latest book, Faith and Freedom: The Scots-Irish in America, he shows that this Ulster-Scots heritage is not just confined to Northern Ireland, but has much broader significance. In this, his fifth book, Kennedy concentrates on the radical thought which culminated so dramatically in the formation of the New World.

"Faith" and "Freedom" were the watchwords of the Ulster-Scots (whom Kennedy refers to as the "Scots-Irish") who were primarily Presbyterians who settled the American frontier in the 18th century. They were one of the most influential ethnic strains in America. Their noble, high-minded ideals became the moral cornerstones of the United States as a nation and were indelibly enshrined in its constitution.

Billy Kennedy's new book widens the inspiring story of how a highly determined and very courageous God-fearing people stamped their distinctive character on the various facets of American society. The latest journey extends back 200 years to when the Scots-Irish pioneers were moving the American frontier to its outer limits – setting up townships that became great centers of population, founding log cabin churches that were to spiral the message of the gospel, and establishing schools which were to grow into some of the foremost educational institutions in America today.

From Pennsylvania, New Hampshire and Maryland on America's eastern seaboard, the immigrants from Ulster moved in a generally westerly direction, with some stopping off to settle in the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia and the Carolinas, others heading into Tennessee, Kentucky, Georgia and Missouri, their sons and daughters heeding the call to settle Texas, Mississippi and Alabama in the south, or Kansas or Oklahoma in the west.

Kennedy recounts the tale of a hardy pioneering breed of people and the personalities who came to the fore during a fascinating period of history. It's an absorbing story about a European people who created a civilization in a wilderness and who helped lay the solid foundations for what many believe was once the greatest nation on Earth, and which some believe still is.

Kennedy firmly believes that America would not be the nation it is today but for the pioneering spirit of its Scots-Irish settlers: "Establishing a settlement in the harsh, rugged and in parts hostile countryside of the north of Ireland during the 17th century prepared the Scots-Irish for their experiences when they arrived in America to start a new life."

Indeed, largely due to their past experiences in lowland Scotland and the north of Ireland, the Scots-Irish fared much better than the other British settlers like the English, Welsh and Scottish Highlands in resisting the hostilities of the Indian tribes and pushing the frontier south and west to its very limits.

300 years have passed since the Scots-Irish immigrants such as County Donegal Presbyterian pastor Francis Makemie, landed on American soil. The fundamentals of Faith and Freedom were profound, meaningful and enriching to these proud pioneering people from Ulster and lowland Scotland. They have been permanently ingrained in the constitutional imperatives of the American nation, and, today, they stand as testimony to all that was achieved in the early formative years of struggle and supreme sacrifice on the frontier.

Between 1717 and the end of the 18th century, an estimated quarter of a million Scots-Irish Presbyterians emigrated to America. In simple wooden sailing ships they sailed from the ports of Londonderry, Belfast, Larne, Portrush and Newry for the far-flung ports of New York, Philadelphia, New Castle, Boston, Baltimore and Charleston. In the U.S. today, an estimated 44 million people claim Irish extraction and, of these, 56% are of Protestant stock. Billy Kennedy's new book records for posterity the outstanding contributions of the Scots-Irish in America. Whether you are of Scots-Irish stock yourself or not, this book and the others in the Kennedy series are well worth reading. □

An American Returns to Ireland – Part II

Just before we drove north, a rather funny incident took place. As everyone knows, there are no snakes or Negroes in Ireland (St. Patrick drove all the snakes out and the Negroes were content to eat or sell one another into slavery back in Africa). Anyway, the liberal feminist president of Ireland, Ms. Mary Robinson, wanted to have some Negroes (or do they call them African-Irish now?) present when she gave a big speech on the "blessings" of "diversity." So she imported sixteen "refugees" from the Sudan for the occasion to prove what a big, stupid bleeding heart she has. Well, come the day of her "diversity" speech, lo and behold, her Negroes (sorry, African-Irish) were nowhere to be found. The police were dispatched to scour the streets of Dublin and they looked high and low but could not find them. So Ms. Robinson had to make do with a hastily gathered group of grinning Hindus and Sikhs. The next day it was reported that the African-Irish had gotten separated from their interpreter/guide and had spent the day staring into store windows at the "shiny things." I'm sure they will make a profound contribution to Irish society and culture and be valued members of Sinn Fein in years to come!

This situation has now changed, of course. Even in the American press we are reading about the hordes of African asylum seekers descending on Ireland, hands outstretched for that "free money" they had heard about back in Africa. Most Irish naively think this "diversity" is wonderful. Having long been called "The niggers of Europe," their low self-esteem has led them to think of Negroes as a kindred oppressed people. In pubs frequented by the IRA, they have set up rooms dedicated to Nelson Mandela, Steve Biko and assorted other Marxist killers of White people. How sick can you get, honoring the very people who want to do away with all White people? All you have to do is look at America to see what the joys of diversity will bring you – race-mixing, crime, disease, slums and filth. It could be Ireland's fate as well. They should take a good look at the U.S.

It was on the day of the vote on the Good Friday Accord [Peace agreement – Ed.] that I crossed the border into Northern Ireland. No one from my family, in all their trips to Ireland, had ever set foot north of the border because of the "Troubles." I wanted to see the situation for myself. The border itself was eerie. Concrete barriers and bunkers all decked out in barbwire but totally unmanned. The countryside was as beautiful as in the South but the towns soon betrayed the undercurrent of strife that prevailed everywhere in the North. British army patrols, automatic rifles at the ready, prowled the streets of Newry, Portadown and Armagh. Every town and village was clearly divided between Catholic and Protestant areas. The curbs were painted either red, white and blue, or orange, white and green, and bus stops and walls were decorated with paintings and murals dedicated either to the Crown or to the IRA. You always knew exactly where you were. In Armagh, we ran into a RUC [Northern Ireland police – Ed.] "flying roadblock," an unmarked police car stopped in the middle of a street, all four doors opened and two machine gun toting cops covered two others as they checked papers and cars. When we got to the front of the line, they just laughed and waved us on. I guess it was my cowboy hat and boots coupled with the large sign on the dashboard that read: "American tourists! Please don't bomb. We are spending money in all pubs!!"

That night we went to a pub to eat and catch the election results. Fat chance: the juke box was playing American black rap music and on TV was the Jerry Springer show with two White women pulling each other's hair over a pimpishly-dressed Negro. It really warmed my heart to see the Irish soaking up the best elements of the new American "culture." What next, Irish stew served up with pigs' feet, chitterlings and a side of watermelon? Still looking for the results, we returned to our B&B and turned on the TV to catch the news – but it was in Gaelic! The only Gaelic I know was picked up on the streets in Hell's Kitchen and would be unprintable, so I gave up and just bought a paper in the morning.

I noted a lot of differences between the North and South of Ireland. Most apparent were the better roads and clearer road signs in the North. I also noted a deeper pride and awareness of their Celtic heritage in the North. Navan Fort or Emain Macha, the hill fort that was the seat of power for the high kings of Ulster, was the most inspiring and spiritual place I visited in all of Ireland. This is where Cuchulainn lived and fought, where the Tain was written, where the Druids taught and sacrificed. Tara is pale by comparison. Another place in the North that I loved was the Ulster-American Folk Park in Omagh. It was there only three months before some idiot in the "Real IRA" blew up twenty-six innocent civilians, perhaps to pay them back for voting for Peace. The biggest difference of all was that no one smiled in the North. I guess they just don't have that much to smile about yet. Perhaps one day they will. That's a day we must all work towards. □
